

Noah Weinmann - new Team

Foden/Weinmann Becomes Wilkinson/Weinmann

After just under a year and a half, the British-German sidecar duo of Foden and Weinmann is parting ways. Despite securing four World Championship race wins and three podium finishes alongside Noah Weinmann, Dan Foden intends to develop young Ryan Beavis as his long-term passenger. The Briton has previously gained World Championship experience riding with Jack Rogers.

"Dan's decision came quite unexpectedly," says Noah Weinmann, who remains surprised by the move. However, skilled and—crucially—physically fit passengers like the 21-year-old from Weißbach-Crispenhofen are in high demand in the sport. It is now confirmed that the sports economics student will be in the sidecar with Britain's Brett Wilkinson for the upcoming season.

The 34-year-old from Portsmouth finished fourth in the World Championship standings this season with Joe Millard and claimed a race win at the Sidecarcross of Nations in France last week. With this sporting highlight, 38-year-old Millard is ending his career, as he had long planned to do.

"I've known Brett Wilkinson for years. A big plus is that he uses the same equipment as Dan: a WSP frame with a left-hand sidecar, a 640cc KTM four-stroke engine, and Reiger suspension components," notes Noah Weinmann, anticipating no issues with the switch. The duo will ensure there are no difficulties adjusting to each other's riding styles during their first joint test run in Germany on the weekend of October 17–18.
