WM-Finale Rudersberg: zwei Laufsiege für Noah/Weinmann

A good ending makes everything beautiful.

Noah Weinmann was visibly blown away. "This feels almost surreal," the 20-year-old from the Weißbach district struggled to compose himself long after the World Championship final in Rudersberg. What had happened? After the crash at the Belgian GP at the end of June, in which driver Joshua suffered serious spinal injuries, passenger Noah joined 25-year-old Briton Dan Foden four weeks later for his comeback race. Since then, the newly formed duo's success curve has been steeply upward, culminating in a second-place finish at the French GP in early September.

In Rudersberg, the brilliant pair delivered their ultimate masterpiece. With victories in the qualifying race and both races, the British-German pairing dominated the racing as surprisingly as they did impressively. The fact that their victory in the first race was subsequently downgraded to sixth place by race control due to their sidecar exceeding the noise limit by 0.6 dB(A) is something the Seiden team calmly accepts as a minor blemish on an otherwise near-perfect weekend. "We've shown our potential. That's crucial," Dan Foden hints at the future plans of the newly formed team.

Because this season, the duo could indeed turn a new page in the history books of the Sidecar Cross World Championship. The reigning world champions Hermans/van den Bogaart, crowned in Rudersberg, will certainly have Foden/Weinmann on their radar.
